Description

A woman with a flipped forelock of hair and cross-patterned shirt, Mine Okubo, stands in profile in the right foreground observing a plumbing crew dig up and replace the camp's water and sewage system. A workman in a striped shirt and cap, holds a wrench while standing over a pipe. He and two other men turn to look at a leak that has sprung on the worksite. Tall mounds of dirt surround them. A shovel, pickax and pair of tall boots lie in the midground. A kerosene lantern sits on a mound in the foreground. Barracks are visible in the background.;1 drawing on paper : ink ; image 9.25 x 13 in.
