Basic Detail Report

a Jeanne Zoche Photolemal Par many 32, 1943 my auto biography It was the seventh day of the seventh month, at the seventh know, tipping the cale at seven pounds, that is, thing the seventh child of mundate of the grations can't into their world I was described and their world I was seven terms my leady forwards. my first name terms at the graties my these togs are show given in the family, when I first each the light of day on after that July maning many year The print to tell carned to the term States in the saily 19000 . To ming childen de they beech in theather to Injun, "a at a distance of the stand Inites apart allonge they did not and the thin, they must beek from the best of their felder from and form. Bill of their fields from and from. Bill of their fields from antenne man weed forming front a forming forming man weed to prove the formation of the series and the formation forming the series and the formation for the matter weed may another the should for the the formation of sector and the the the should be and the should be the the should be and and school the formation of another the forther the the the should be and the forther came the the second the forther the the should go for appearing the forther came the the second states may made that

My Autobiography

Date

1943

Primary Maker

Yoshino, Nina (Nanaye) Jeanne

Medium

paper

Description

Autobiographical essay written by Nina (Nanaye) Jeanne Yoshino, dated January 22, 1943. The essay was written for Garrett Starmer's Senior Problems Class at the Tule Lake High School. Nina writes that she was born on July 7, 1925 to a family who already had three boys and three girls. She mentions that her parents came to the United States in the early 1900s when they were children.

Dimensions

10.5 x 8 in